Google Web Designer

The Good	The Bad	The Bottomline
The interface is clear. All the options are explained well.	It is meant for advertisement. The template designs push you into a main stream design.	Google Web Designer is made to create advertisement. But in a simple visual way. Just dragging and dropping, not having to code.

Review

The user interface:

The interface looks familiar. It has the appearance of an Adobe application. But when starting using it it is not as logic as it seemed. I think you have to get familiar with the use of this application to get good use out of it.

Testing the tool (learning by doing — trial and error) What would/could a designer use this tool for?

Once you get more familiar with the application you can probably make quite solid banners. With animated functions. It is fairly easy to learn because of the visual interface.

Depending on what kind of free this tool is, how "free" is this tool really?

The tool is designed by Google. So google already set the defaults. It isn't open source. Because the program is only shown in the user interface, nothing is shared about how the program is made.
